Hut! Rest Assured Pop Warner

Troubled Pop Warner football players can relax now, assured they'll have a field to practice on and that they won't miss any valuable practicing days for the Fall season. Upland City Council moved to allow the 150 members of the Pop Warner Football League to use Hawkins field for night practice for some three weeks until street lights are installed at the playing field of Pioneer Junior High, 245 W. 18th St.

The city will rent the four lights for $40 a month all year. Because Hawkins field is scheduled for renovation this fall, the league was originally denied permission to use it. Gordon Kelly, president of Upland Pony League baseball association, addressed the council Tuesday and said although he sympathized for Pop Warner teams, the field was in sore need of replanting so it would be in proper condition for baseball season in March and that the replanting should not be postponed.

After considerable discussion by councilmen, Harold Bailin moved to send proposed amendments to the text of the Upland Municipal Code regarding Planned Residential Development and Planned Unit Development back to the Planning Commission for further study and consideration at their Sept. 28 meeting. It was decided that the Planning Commission would report back to the council on Oct. 2 on these amendments. Bailin felt the planned unit development plan for Upland lacked an incentive factor for developers.

He moved to revamp the ordinance to include at least a 10 percent density factor incentive to attract developers. It was suggested that the 20 percent street requirement be removed in the PUD also.

The ordinance to increase the fee builders are required to pay into the city fund for the purchase of water stock was unanimously approved by the council on the second reading.

A resolution requesting that San Bernardino County administer the Federal Aid Urban Highway Program was approved. Upland's share of the federal aid of the urban system funds is $26,600 of $429,000 for the county.

City Manager Elwin "Pinky" Alder said there would be greater flexibility and benefit to the city to have the county administer the funds. The funds are to be used on a dollar for dollar matching basis for right-of-way acquisition and construction of street and highway projects of the Urban Highway System.

Planning Director Rod Anderson recommended that the council approve the Planning Commission's plan for a modified government subsidized housing distribution model for the valley portion of San Bernardino County. Anderson said the Planning Commission disapproved with guidelines of the "mini-model" of subsidized housing within the city because of the plan to have socioeconomic mixing in residential areas.

"Usually a student takes the day session until she gets a job at the entry level, then enrolls in the evening session for job upgrading," she said.

The school is equipped with 21 single-needle machines and four special units. The special units are used for buttons, buttonholes and blind stitching.

As at Chino, the training at Fontana will be self-paced with the emphasis on personalized instruction.

Additional information on training and job opportunities in the garment and drapery field may be obtained by dropping by the new address.

The zone is inconsistent for that type development. Mayor Abner Haldeman said the Mayor's Advisory committee is studying the land use for both sides.

Training, Info Center Opens At Chaffey College

Chaffey College had an open house for the community last week to mark the "grand opening" of its new training and information center at 8518 Sierra Ave., in Fontana.

The heart of the center will be the college's power-sewing school which Chaffey pioneered in Chino some four years ago and developed into a top-priority program for the garment and drapery industry.

The program resumed operation Tuesday after being suspended in midsummer to make the move to Fontana from Chino.

Lobby Bajcer, chief instructor for the program, was hostess for the open house which included power-sewing demonstrations and displays of student production.

Owing to the demand for power-sewing operators, Chaffey will continue the program on an open-end basis and maintain both a day and evening schedule. Class sessions will be from 8:30 until 2 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays and 4-10 p.m., Mondays-Wednesdays.

"Our Chino experience proved that the industry hires our girls about as fast as we can train them," reported Ms. Bajcer, who also coordinates the job placement.

also turned in a letter of resignation. Since commissioners Irene Morrill and Flora Kushin were out of town, the board couldn't authorize payment of $275, in bills owed Taylor until the commissioner's return.

Taylor's letter said, "In view of the conditions which exist, it is impossible to accept responsibility or make recommendations to the commission."

Mary Ellen Rocha, one time Housing Authority secretary, clerk and cashier, also resigned due to "pressure from harassment and threats on my life."

A committee of two commissioners, Ms. Nylander and Rivera were appointed to recruit a replacement for Ms. Rocha. Vice Mayor John McCarthy attended the special session and said the city personnel department will assist in providing qualified applicants if needed.

2ND YEAR OF OPERATION

Retired Persons Assoc. Receives Charter

After two years of operation, the Upland-Ontario Chapter (number 781) of the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP), received its charter. Cicero Baquet, area IX vice-president, presented the charter to Virginia Marshall who organized the chapter in Sept. 1970 and served as president for one year.

The chapter will celebrate its second birthday party at a luncheon Monday, Sept. 18 at Hart Hall of the Upland Presbyterian Church, 869 N. Euclid Ave.

Other upcoming activities include a tour to "Wild Animal Park" in San Diego on Thursday, Sept. 28. Those interested in this activity should call Joe Webb at 593-1683. A "Defensive Driving" course, designed by the National Safety Council, will be offered in October.

Plans are in the works to organize a Consumer Information Desk such as those currently in operation on the East Coast and in the Mid-West. Volunteers will be trained for this free community service. Interested persons may call Ms. Marshall at 984-5893.

The Upland-Ontario chapter has 450 members and is very active. The AARP is said to be the nation's largest organization dedicated to helping older persons achieve retirement lives of independence, dignity and purpose. Chapters of the AARP have public service as their watchword and exist to enable their members to help each other and their communities.

AARP membership is open to all persons 55 years of age or older, whether retired or not. Membership information is available by calling Harold Joelson at 985-7856.

The association also sponsors services designed to help older persons living on fixed retirement incomes meet their health, insurance, medical and other needs.

The AARP and its sister organization, the National Retired Teachers Association (NRTA) developed the first group health insurance plans for the elderly and now offer a wide range of plans, including insurance to complement Medicare and automobile insurance with no cancellation features.

Other AARP services include a travel service geared to mature needs, mail order discount drug service, and an Institute of Lifetime Learning program, which offers local classes. Classes scheduled for the near future include: Creative Writing, Legal Aid and Nursing Skill and Aid in the Home. Information on classes may be obtained by calling Wilma Van Ornam at 982-5965.

The annual Area IX AARP picnic will be held at 10 a.m., Wednesday, Sept. 27, in Sylvan Park, Redlands.

Here She Comes, Folks, Ms. America

By PATRICIA REID

Not all domesticated mothers (housewives or employed), who live in small residential communities are "unenlightened" as women or complacent with the "way things are."

Vibrations from the Women's Liberation Movement of the past two years have penetrated the minds and feelings of women as far as unincorporated Cucamonga.

Midge Lennert, mother of 3, who lives with her family at 8225 Red Hill Country Club Drive in Cucamonga, has felt strongly for at least 10 years that women have been consistently put down and that they do have an important contribution to make to society.

Ten years ago she delivered a speech at Chaffey College detailing the exploitation of working women in the local area and "brought the house down." She put the speech together herself by researching the national statistics on discrimination against working women and then "hoisted it" and talked to local working women and revealed specific incidents of salary discrepancies, and lack of benefits, etcetera.

Ms. Lennert works at the Department of Corrections in Ontario and is a Women's Parole Agent (the only woman). She's also worked at the California Institute for Women near Chino Women's Correctional officer. Her experiences in the past 10 years -- and the vast reading of "feminist" literature she's done has inspired her to join with her sister, Norma Willson, from Lomita, who's also married and has three children, to put out a women's paper "about women for women."

Two issues of "51 Percent -- A Paper of Joyful Noise for the Majority Sex" have come out. The September issue is in the works. Ms. Lennert reported that the response from the July and August issues "was fantastic." "We think women are hungry for this type of thing," she said.

Ms. Lennert (a member of NOW and the National Women's Political Caucus) said she and Ms. Willson footed the bill for the July issue ($400) entirely themselves. Some 6,000 issues of the artistic four page tabloid newspaper were printed. Ms. Lennert said she has received letters from several housewives in Cucamonga, Upland and Ontario praising the paper. Only 1,000 were distributed in the Pomona Valley.

Copies were distributed in Lomita and through various National Organization of Women chapters. The arty paper is not so radical that it turns off housewives -- it's purpose is as an outlet for women to express themselves. "We have a real ball putting the paper out -- my kids help paste up and draw pictures we use. Both of us are really enjoying working with other women on this new paper," said Ms. Lennert.

Besides contributing poetry, art work and articles, women readers can now buy an advertisement space for $5 per column inch and "say whatever they want." The editorial policy is to make 51 Percent entirely free; "free in spirit, free in its format, free from organizational edict and pressure and free to the readers."

The front page articles have to do with women's legal rights; how the California legislators stand on the Equal Rights Amendment and other legal ways women are discriminated against.

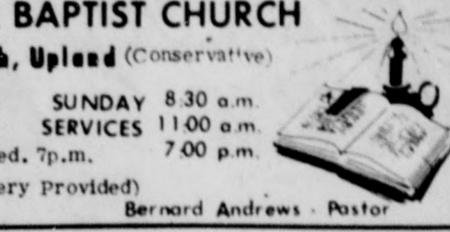

Ms. Lennert said her husband was "amused" at first with the paper, but after the response, he said he was glad he didn't have a passive wife. Other parole officers at work complimented the paper according to Ms. Lennert. "Men like women to have their own thoughts and ideas and not to be afraid to speak out," she said.

Ms. Lennert plans to encourage college women at Chaffey College and the Claremont Colleges to contribute to 51 Percent. She will run a survey of working conditions in the greater Ontario area for the October issue. She and her sister will interview women laborers in "sweat shops" and department stores and compare salaries, benefits, etc.

Ms. Lennert believes that women have to be taken seriously in society before they can make a contribution. "A woman whose own person makes a better contribution and liberation of the female liberates the male," she said.

Ms. Lennert and Ms. Willson hope 51 Percent provides a means of expression for isolated housewives who feel suppressed and "lets them know they're not alone." Ms. Lennert also told about successful Women's Centers in other cities where housewives and other women go for consciousness raising rap sessions. She said she feels there's a need for one in the Cucamonga area where Chicano women could go and rap.

The struggle for power.

We could run short of electricity.
Conservation is vital.

Remember that record-breaking heat wave last year?

You weren't the only one sweating it out.

So were we. The demand for electricity hit an all-time peak on September 13, 1971. It was 13% higher than the 1970 peak.

We met all demands, but our system was severely strained.

But what about the years ahead? Each year the demand for electricity keeps right on growing. New homes keep going up. And schools. Office buildings. Factories.

All will require additional electricity. So will the new equipment needed to clean up the environment.

Unless Edison is permitted to build additional power plants and transmission lines, it may become necessary to blackout blocks of customers on a rotational basis within two or three years.

Yet permits necessary to build any new major plants have been delayed or blocked for the past four years.

While a power shortage did not become a reality in 1971, the threat of one did. Edison is working with industrial and business firms to conserve electricity in offices and factories.

That's an immediate problem. We're working hard to resolve it.

The long-range problem requires finding more ways to conserve energy and to use our nation's total energy resources wisely. That involves all of us.

In Edison's fossil-fueled plants, for example, we're now able to produce 30% more electricity from a unit of fuel than in 1948. That helps.

And by using higher-voltage transmission lines, we're also able to deliver electricity more efficiently.

Perhaps you can conserve energy, too. Have you considered ways to make every kilowatt count at home? We'll be happy to send you a list of practical suggestions.

Marge Stewart--'Something Super'

MS.

Ms. Margaret Stewart is something of a super Girl Scout. "And I know the image so many people have of Girl Scouts," she said. "But I've got news for them—scouting is one of the most progressive organizations in the country. The old-fashioned Girl Scout image just doesn't fit."

Ms. Stewart, who was born and reared in Ontario, is a woman very much involved with her community. Scouting, definitely, is her main interest. "I started as a Brownie way back in 1929 when I was just a little girl," she said. "I was an intermediate, then a mariner scout when I was at Chaffey High School. I took a respite—and went to Chaffey College for two years. Then I got married and my husband and I moved to Upland. My daughters got interested in scouting, so mother was right there to help. I was an adult volunteer leader in 1954."

Ms. Stewart was sent to New Zealand as a visitor-observer in 1963. "I was selected by the national Girl Scout, Girl Scouts of the USA," she said. Later, she attended several regional conferences and was East San Gabriel Council President, 1964-66.

"Finally," said Ms. Stewart, "I got my present job." Currently, she is the Spanish Trails Council's Public Relations Director.

"I'd been president for three and a half years. A staff vacancy for a PR director came up and no one took it. Well, I mulled it over. Then I talked with my three vice presidents. We decided I ought to apply to the regional organization. I did and I got the job. I've been with it for five years now."

Concerning this job, she said, "My main duties are to give staff service to the public relations committee for developing policy, emphasis, plans and estimated expenses for the council PR services. I also have to see that specific PR events in the council plan of work are carried out. I prepare news releases and deal with the media. I work with a printer and consultants on art and layout form."

She paused for breath. "I guess you could say I definitely do a little bit of everything."

"Eventually, everything seems to fall back on the public relations department."

Ms. Stewart has definite opinions on scouting. "As I said before, the image so many people have is ridiculous. We're not some antiquated organization."

We're one of the most modern in the country. Right now there's a lot of talk about equal opportunity and rights for our minority citizens. Well, the Girl Scouts is an organization that always has given everyone an equal chance. It's part of our motto—regardless of race, creed and color. That goes back to Juliette Lowe, founder of the Girl Scouts . . . and that was some time ago."

Aside from her interest in scouting, Ms. Stewart finds an outlet in politics.

"And that goes way back to when I was in high school," she said. "I was president of the high school student body at Chaffey. I was only the third girl to make that position and I beat the captain of the high school football team, I think that shows you how gung-ho I was."

Ms. Stewart reflected a moment. "I am not a stay-at-home type woman," she said then. "My husband is an active man and I'm certainly an active woman. It works out. Maybe it makes us interesting," I don't know. I've always been a person who liked to get out and do things. I've felt that someone had to do the work, so why not me? It's just worked out. I do not lack things to do."

Let Men Do The Wash, Expert Tells Women

as free of turbidity and color, tasteless and odorless, soft and noncorrosive and nonstaining.

In a typical case, according to Hamblin, 3 cents per person per day is all it would cost to buy quality service and quality water in any community where it is now lacking. With such an increase, the annual water bill for the average family would still be only half of what it pays for gas, electricity, or telephone service.

The American Water Works Association, which Hamblin heads, is a nonprofit scientific and educational organization dedicated to the improvement of public water supplies.

"Water is almost universally safe," Hamblin said, "but it is not always as high in quality as is possible with today's technology. Women can play the deciding role in winning approval for programs for water improvement within their own community. All it takes to gain such improvement is public support."

Hamblin defined quality water as daily living if we have plenty of quality water on tap," he said. "Every woman knows that excessively hard water makes proper hair and skin care impossible. Every woman knows that water that is unpalatable to drink also makes unpalatable coffee and impairs the flavor of everything with which it is mixed—such as soups, milk powder, frozen juices and gelatin desserts. Reducing water hardness and eliminating off-tastes are just two improvements

a water utility can make."

Beef Cuts The Mustard The Sudden Rise Of Granola

Whether for a patio party or just a lucky family, this roast of beef will delight and surprise its partakers.

A California technique is used to barbecue a roll of beef sirloin tip to savory perfection. It's the famous mustard and rock salt method of barbecuing which needs no fancy gadgets or equipment. It's so simple it can be done anywhere---at the beach---in the backyard---out camping---in the patio.

Take a choice rolled beef sirloin tip roast. Coat it with prepared mustard and pat rock salt all over in a thick covering. Then place it directly (yes, directly!) on a bed of hot coals. It roasts without benefit of grill, spit or hood. Most of the salt comes off in the coals when turning the roast, but the zesty flavor remains.

Your family and friends will love the taste. They'll benefit as always from the vital, life giving food nutrients found in beef. Beef as merchandised in California is outstanding in protein, vitamins and minerals. And its satisfying flavor makes it no wonder that beef leads all other meat in American popularity.

4 to 5 pound rolled beef sirloin tip roast

3 cups rock salt

1 cup prepared mustard

Place sheet of waxed paper twice as long as roast on baking sheet. In center of paper spread a cup of rock salt in even layer about the length of roast. Spread top of roast lavishly with mustard and place mustard side down on rock salt bed. Spread remaining mustard over uncovered surface of beef and pat remaining rock salt as thickly as possible into mustard. Fold waxed paper up and around roast.

Slide wrapped beef directly onto bed of hot coals. Roast 30 minutes, then turn beef and continue to roast 30 minutes longer. After turning, insert meat thermometer so tip reaches center of roast. When internal temperature registers 130 degrees beef will be rare to medium rare. Remove beef from coals and knock off any remaining salt. Serve hot or cold.

A natural, once-little-heard-of "health food" gaining popularity is granola. Priced at about 55 cents per pound, granola is basically an oatmeal cereal. Grabbing a handful of granola can be devastating to the calorie budget, states University of California Agricultural Extension Home Advisor Sharon Higgins.

A typical ingredient listing in order of importance: oats, brown sugar, vegetable oil, wheat germ, sesame seed, salt and vanilla flavoring. Granola may also have nuts and/or coconut, honey, soy grits, lecithin, brewer's yeast and other flavoring.

One ounce must have at least 150 calories and possibly more, compared to the 100 calories in an ounce of the average prepared cereal. Nutrition-wise, granola would be rich in protein and the B-vitamins like any other high protein cereal, except that other cereals do not contain added oil, adds Ms. Higgins.

The flavor and crunchiness of granola results from the brown sugar and from its being toasted with oil.

Watch out for those granola calories! Most people don't weigh their cereal nor their snacks. Granola is a compact and very concentrated food. An ounce measures out to be only about four tablespoons. In a cup you would get a whopping 600 calories, or more, if nuts, honey or coconut were included.

You can save some money and calories by making your own. Here is a recipe that is lower in calories than the granola you buy because it has no oil:

In a rimmed baking pan (about 10" by 15") combine 3 cups rolled oats (quick cooking type), 1/2 cup wheat germ (unsweetened), 1/4 cup sesame seed, 1/2 cup flaked coconut (if desired).

FOOD

Dr. Warns Athletes Against Fad Diets

A nationally recognized physician has warned high school and college football players against associating special diets with power and strength.

Dr. Lawrence M. Hursh, M.D., University of Illinois health service director, said recently that young football players frequently distort their eating habits, and as a result, their health, to fit a particular position on the team.

"A number of athletes believe they need high protein diets, so they start eating meat like crazy. Special diets such as these have no effect on athletic performance," said Dr. Hursh.

Seniors Alerted To Food Programs

"Special supplements, wheat germ, tiger's milk, all of this sort of thing that some coaches encourage may have some kind of psychological advantage for a boy," he said. "But it can also be dangerous to delude him with notions, not based on scientific fact, that these foods may have some special effect."

Peak performance, he contends, is best achieved through a diet providing enough calories to meet individual energy needs and a proper balance of protein, carbohydrates, fats, vitamins and minerals. Such a diet has been devised by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

A campaign is now under way in California to locate older people on small fixed incomes who may be unaware that they are eligible to buy food stamps or take advantage of other food assistance programs.

"This is a short-term, 90-day project," Baxter said.

"We're concerned that many of our older citizens on small incomes don't always have enough money for food and consequently may be suffering from malnutrition. California has two programs. Through one, people can buy food stamps worth more than the money they pay for them, then use them as cash in any food store. Through the other program, surplus foods are given free to people in need."

Baxter said that a pamphlet describing these programs has been distributed to everyone receiving a Social Security pension, together with a return card for the convenience of those wishing further assistance. The American Red Cross is contacting those who send in cards to help them sign up for food assistance, he said.

The Commission on Aging is helping by contacting all agencies with whom it has contractual agreements asking them to help the Red Cross by providing volunteers to locate people who may be eligible but have not responded to the offer.

"We are especially concerned that many older people may be reluctant to come forward because they imagine the food stamp program is a welfare or charity service," Baxter said. "They don't have to be qualified for public assistance to participate, although there are income limits. We want to be sure that everyone who is eligible is aware of this opportunity to buy more and better food without spending extra money. If they have very little money, they can get the food stamps free."

Anyone who may be eligible and wishes to apply or get further information should contact the nearest Social Security Office, Baxter said.

EVERY DOLLAR
YOU SAVE IS A BOOST TO THE ECONOMY.

Some people would have you believe that saving money is a disservice to the economy of this country. Nothing could be further from the truth.

Your money is loaned out to build new homes and churches and shopping centers, and low-cost multiple dwellings.

And that means jobs. Jobs for carpenters, bricklayers, plumbers, road-builders, painters and a host of other occupations. Jobs for the people who cut the timber, make the bricks, manufacture the plumbing materials and paint.

The list is endless. It goes on and on. Your savings working to build the economy while they are building for your future.

It has been estimated that every dollar provided by a Savings and Loan creates four dollars of new economic activity. As a result, the $38 billion we loaned in mortgages last year generated $152 billion in the economy.

How To Be Unpopular With The 'Common Housefly'

Of all the insects in the world, Musca Domestica is probably man's greatest enemy.

It transmits disease and death, buzzes and bites and yet, is so common it is almost taken for granted.

The housefly carries an average of 1,250,000 bacteria but can carry 500,000,000. It may be flying around your dinner table tonight but can be as far as six and a half miles away tomorrow.

Flies may spread dysentery, summer or infant diarrhea, typhoid fever, tuberculosis, trachoma. Bacillary dysentery -- a disease of the intestines -- is more prevalent in the summer when the fly population is the greatest.

It has been proven that fly-contaminated milk may lead to fatal cases of infant diarrhea. The common housefly can spread typhoid fever by picking up the germ from unsanitary toilet facilities used by a victim of the disease or an unsuspecting "healthy" carrier.

Trachoma blinds scores of people in Africa in epidemics spread directly by flies. This eye disease is rare in the United States but a number of Americans are victims of highly contagious eye infection called conjunctivitis (or "pink eye") which can be the forerunner of trachoma if uncontrolled.

Just how these tiny insects can be so efficient as disease carriers is the result of their "special equipment" seemingly designed for this purpose.

The fly's six feet are equipped with bristles and sticky pads and his proboscis (nose) is hairy, so that germs and filth are readily collected. Then, all the fly has to do to transmit the infected material is to land on you, on your food, or on the things you touch. Secondly, he deposits infected material he has eaten through his wastes -- which we call "flyspecks."

The fly's built-in method of carrying germs and filth with ease is only part of its remarkable construction which, ironically, almost mirrors that of the man doing the swatting and spraying.

For instance, did you ever get the feeling when wielding a swatter that the fly not only can outmaneuver you but it's mad? According to Dr. Vincent G. Dethier, zoologist-psychologist at the University of Pennsylvania, the fly probably does feel anger and to a degree exhibits motivated behavior like higher forms of life. The fly has a brain, is able to learn and feel pain, states Dr. Dethier.

"Their tiny brains have all the nerve machinery necessary for kinds of behavior once believed possible only with the complex brain of vertebrates," he says.

No doubt one of the few authorities on fly brains, Dr. Dethier has been researching this field for the past 16 years. He has performed operations under a microscope and, using brain-wave recorders and machines that measure tiny changes in body chemistry, has produced convincing evidence that flies are "not merely unfeeling machines."

Fly brains, weighing only 28 millionths of an ounce, are simple and yet basically the same as the human organ, he states.

No one has come up with a tranquilizer for flies but the day may not be too far away as it has been determined that flies also suffer from stress. When the fly is stressed (and comparing the size of a flyswatter to a fly, who wouldn't be?) its endocrine glands secrete chemicals into the blood that cause a rise in heart rate, just like adrenaline in man. Brain-wave recordings show its brain has an electrical activity that varies with the kind of activity in which the fly is engaged.

Dr. Dethier has even gathered evidence on the memory span of the fly. If you don't get him in two minutes (his memory duration) try again later. He will have forgotten you and your swatting right arm.

It appears to be possible to do any surgery with flies that is possible with higher animals including transplanting a brain from one fly to another.

The common housefly has some interesting relatives. Robber flies (Asilidae) prey on other flies, flies in the Eristalis, Syrphidae and Bombyliidae families suck nectar, the Drosophilidae and Trupanidae keep busy fermenting fruit.

Horseflies, houseflies, black or green flies, crane flies, tsetse flies and gnats are all common types. Some fly only at dusk and dawn, some like hot sun, some prefer open spaces, others jungles, swamps and dry spots.

In the air, the fly is remarkable with its pair of organs (halteres) that act as gyroscopes to help elude you.

The fly is also remarkable in the number of ways it lays its eggs. The crane fly digs a hole, using as a pick her pointed abdomen. One fly places its eggs on the fur of an animal and when the animal licks itself, the eggs are swallowed and hatched within its stomach. Bee flies lay their eggs on flying bees to feed on food meant for young bees. The metallic blue or green blowfly is often seen in houses but is much larger than the housefly. The female blowfly looks for meat and other food on which to lay its eggs. Some of these flies can cause great pain and sickness if they are swallowed by man.

A fly in the larval stage can live in oil, mud or the stomach of a horse. By hardening its own larval skin, it becomes a pupa, staying inside till ready to emerge as a mature fly.

Anything around supplies an adequate diet for the fly including garbage, manure or refuse. Its sucking mouth is shaped like a funnel turned upside down. The fly uses this tube (proboscis) like a straw. It can also eat small bits of things by wetting them first with a little saliva. Fortunately, the proboscis is too soft for the housefly to bite.

As most people know, it's a different fly world when it comes to horseflies and deer flies. The stable fly has often been called the "biting housefly" -- he looks like the housefly but has a hard piercing proboscis for sucking blood.

Don't laugh. Research work at the University of California, Davis, indicates that the complete elimination of the housefly is possible if a widespread campaign of chemical sterilization is undertaken.

The idea goes back to the early 1950's when the United States Department of Agriculture, which is still involved in this work, started a project to eliminate the screw worm fly from the American southwest by x-ray radiation.

The radiation process involved the rearing, sterilization and release of male flies to compete with males of the natural population. When the radiated males mate with the females, they also sterilize the females permanently. This eventually eliminated the screw-worm from the southwest.

One of the problems of using this technique to eliminate the housefly is a major one -- the scientists have been unable to mass produce male houseflies for sterilization because it's so hard to tell the male from the female.

Another point-of-view held by some scientists is that the consequences might be far-reaching if the fly becomes extinct. Nature has a delicately balanced scheme and how important is the role of the fly? Is his role vital to man?

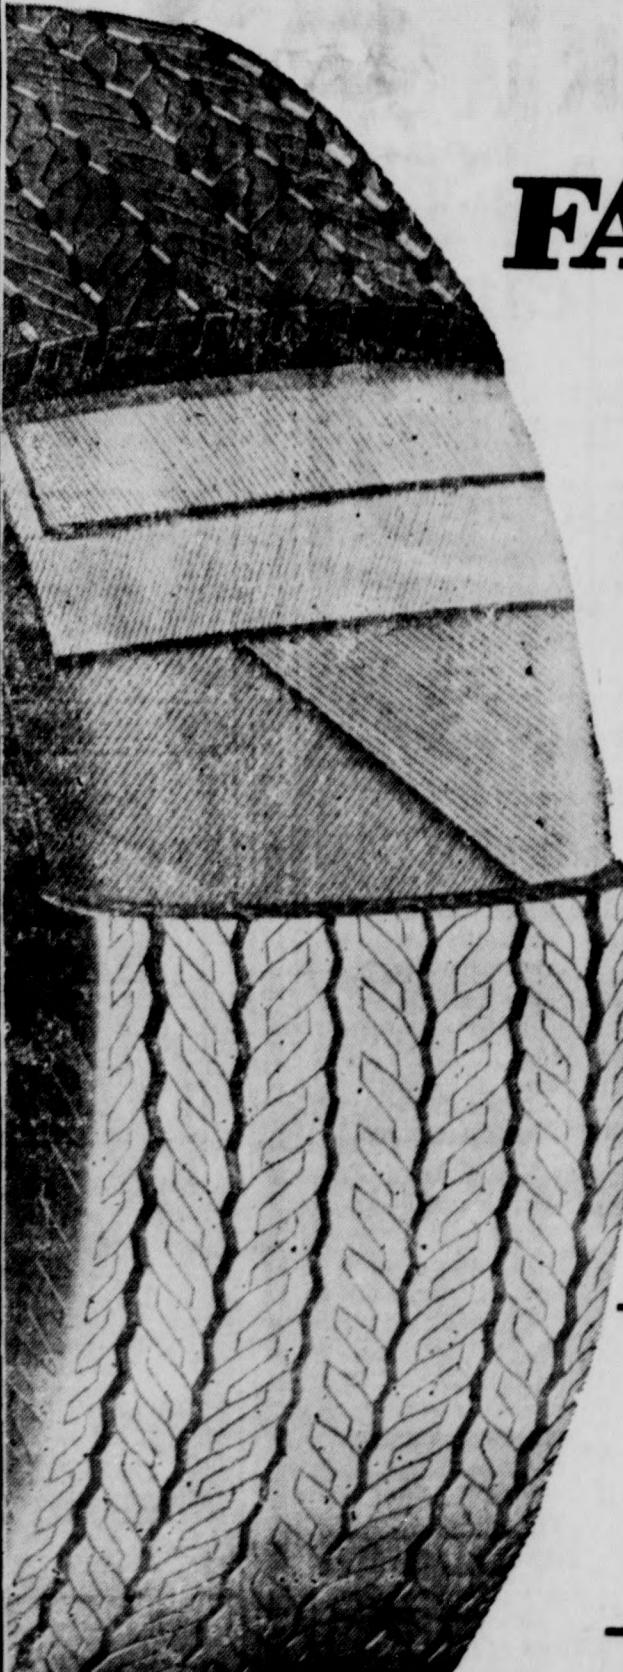

A Davis scientist explains it this way, "I question if it is advisable to eliminate a species of anything. We know frogs eat flies but we don't know what would happen if we eliminated houseflies from the environment.

Regardless, the U.S. Department of Agriculture recently reported what could be a major victory on the war with flies. They have created a very special strain of flies. When in their larval form, they are exposed to temperatures of 92 degrees Fahrenheit or above, then the males mature. They can then be collected, sterilized by exposing them to radiation and set forth to mate with unsuspecting females.

The catch of the program is turning loose more flies. And, who's to say whether or not the female fly will fraternize with this special breed?

While the scientists debate the answer, we're going to stick with the old-fashioned method -- but, please don't use this newspaper!

Why President Nixon Turned Us Off

It is not easy to alienate 203 television stations and most of their audiences with one swirl of a ballpoint pen.

President Nixon did it with aplomb recently by vetoing a two-year, $155 million public television appropriation bill which authorized $65 million in fiscal '73; $90 million in '74.

Nixon urged adoption of a measure allotting a single-year appropriation of $45 million.

Meanwhile, financially frail public television, available to 75 percent of the U.S. public, and 470 public radio stations, are wobbling along on a continuation of the '72 funding rate ($35 million a year).

Pending passage of the President's proposal or an override of the President's veto, public television is grinding to a standstill. Why would the President wish to vex a large bloc of evocative voters only four months before election day?

It wasn't to ease the U.S. taxpayer's burden. The $20 million saving is a mere piddie in an economy that swims in trillions.

The President, rather, was expressing fear of several phases of public television. He warned that public television was creating "a center of power," referring to the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, which distributes government appropriations.

The President, ironically, has influenced that "center of power" by appointing or reappointing 10 of its 15 board members.

The President raised philosophical questions as to whether public TV should even present public affairs and network type news programming. Public television never has attempted network-type news programs, but its documentary and analysis programs have hit at the President particularly on Vietnam, Pentagon and FBI issues.

A president can't directly restrain commercial television if commercial television needles him, but he can effectively strangle a public television system set up as limply as ours, always vulnerable to prevailing politicians.

Mr. Nixon is our No. 1 prevailing politician. He has elected to apply a stranglehold, seemingly fearful than an unbridled system, reputedly dominated by the liberal "Eastern Establishment," would tend to do him wrong, if not do him in.

Ergo: Mr. Nixon decided it was better to antagonize 203 television stations, etc., than grant them extensive funds in a package that also rewarded a central clique of effete snobs bent on crippling him with sniper fire.

You can't blame him. Sen. McGovern, if fearful that a conservative eastern establishment were gunning for him through control of public television, might take comparable budget-getting, punitive action. It is not a politician's nature to feed the hand that bites him.

Personally, I suspect the President was ill-advised, that he was given inaccurate or incomplete information, that someone on his staff was suffering paroxysms of paranoia.

The Senate passed the two-year appropriations bill 82-1 (William Buckley's brother James was the lone dissenter), the House 256-69. Presidential adviser Dr. Clay Whitehead predicted the President would not be inclined to refuse the wishes of Congress. What happened?

Suggestion from Rep. Robert Tiernan (R) of Rhode Island: "The administration looks at public television as a Frankenstein."

The Carnegie Commission in 1967 recommended long-term financing insulated from politicians through an excise tax on the sale of TV sets. President Johnson in 1968 requested enactment. Politicians have been blocking it ever since.

Meanwhile, Britain, Canada, Sweden, Japan and other countries provide "insulated" tax funds for public television systems. Political considerations are irrelevant.

FCC member Nicholas Johnson noted that if the U.S. supported public broadcasting with public funds as firmly as Japan supports its system, the U.S. would be spending $1.8 billion a year.

Mr. Nixon suggests $45 million. For shame.

Reliving The Nifty Fifties. Dig It?

Want to go back 15 years to the days of bobby sox and sweaters, rock and roll?

That's straight where Bill Ballance (KGBS disc jockey can take you Friday, Sept. 8, when he turns the Hollywood Palladium into a giant gymnasium for the "Bill Ballance Nifty Fifties Sock Hop."

Rock and roll revivals have been enjoying a lot of popularity recently, but the events have only featured the entertainers of the 50's. "That's only a small part of the colossal 50's extravaganza we have planned," said Ballance.

"We want to capture the full flavor of the 50's Friday night hops. You kats can come dressed greased or ivy league, leather jackets and low-slung levis or T-shirts and greased hair (crew cuts and flap tops also accepted)," he said, adding: "You kittens should wear those alluring pleated skirts, two-tone oxfords, pedal pushers with pony tails and especially those tight sweaters. We'll be awarding all kinds of prizes for the best outfit and the top prize for the best couple will be a luxurious weekend vacation for two at Murieta Hot Springs with Bill Ballance.

The evening's music will be supplied by Eddie Haddad and the Kanyon who will present a musical salute to the 50's. There will be many more musical surprises slated for the hop as well.

The Palladium "Gym" will be decorated with 50's memory floggers such as basketball hoops (with torn nets), crepe paper hung from the center of the room, fuzzy dice, old 50's film posters and a real 50's D.J. to spin records when the band takes a break.

There will be bop contests and a prancing female porker's hula-hoop exhibition. Casey Kasem, simulating the old radio remotes, will be broadcasting from "Frank's Drive-In" where he will be giving away free burgers and cokes.

Dick Clark, recreating the old "American Bandstands," will introduce a host of five 50's stars and they will all join in to lead a giant bunny hop down Sunset Blvd. and up Vine Street.

Meanwhile, back inside, Ballance has set a number of 50's rock and roll flicks and old 50's "American Bandstand" segments to be projected onto giant screens on the walls.

About mid-evening -- somewhere between Frank's burgers and Dick Clark's hop -- Ballance will tape a "live" segment of his popular "Feminine Forum" radio program with "current" 50's topics.

Tickets are available at all Liberty, Mutual and Ticketon outlets as well as Wallich's Music City and the Palladium box office.

Be There Or Be Square.

Sound Fete Sept. 10

Bernardino and Riverside counties. The winning band will be awarded $250.

An exhibit of paintings, ceramics, leatherwork and works in other media will be held. Local artists wishing to display their work may call KWOW, 628-5541, for instructions.

At 7 p.m. the KWOW disc jockeys will play a softball game with the Diamond Bar All-Star girls' team in the Ganesha Park diamond.

Tradition held true again in the third California 500 Sunday at Ontario Motor Speedway.

The more familiar names like A.J. Foyt, Bobby Unser, and Joe Leonard dropped out the race with various problems while the lesser known names of the USAC circuit, Roger McCluskey, Mike Hiss, and Billy Vukovich stuck around to pick up the spoils of finishing 1-2-3 respectively in the prestigious race.

Plagued by an unusually high amount of yellow flags, the field then came to a halt on the 76th lap when a sudden downpour made it impossible to run safely.

After a brief delay of two hours, the race began again and only 10 of the 33 cars actually finished it—thus illustrating the point that the best car doesn't necessarily always win.

Sometimes it's the luckiest one. McCluskey, like previous Cal 500 winners Jim McElreath and Leonard, ran cautiously until there was nothing to do but take first place and the $127,609 jackpot that comes with it.

Actually, it didn't take long for disaster to strike the big name drivers. Johnny Grant, the race's fastest qualifier and the first man to ever break the 200 mile-per-hour barrier, exited before the green flag when his engine blew.

After that, everything fell into place for the likes of McCluskey and Co.

Obstacles, such as jackrabbits running loosely around the track during the race, contributed to presence of slow lap times and the pace car early in the race.

Master Plans

San Dimas Hotel

Architecture Of The Pomona Valley

Whether you are searching for a church steeple made out of wood or a monolithic chapel or buildings with walls made of granite rocks, the Pomona Valley is one place to look.

Architectural styles here range from something out of Sir Walter Scott to a science fiction fantasy.

The buildings pictured are a sampling of various architectural forms in the Pomona Valley -- giving some idea of the influences now and in the history of Southern California architecture.

The Spanish-tiled house pictured is one of the oldest houses in Upland -- located at the corner of Baseline Rd. and San Antonio Ave. Its Spanish architecture is one form that has survived from earlier times to be used extensively in modern architecture.

The old tree-surrounded Carlsruher's mansion in San Dimas was built in the late 1800's but doesn't fit any one architectural style. It has some Victorian influences (the sharply pointed roof) but also looks like an old western hotel -- which is what it was built to be during the mining boom of the 1880's.

The three modern buildings pictured have a similarity in materials used that is not the case with the older buildings, but they also are somewhat different from each other in their lines.

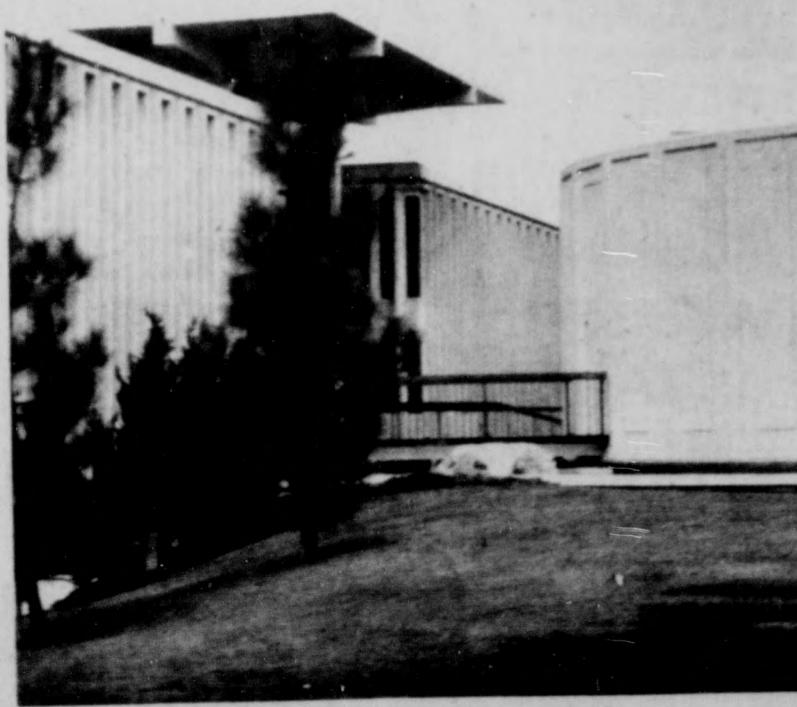

The tall building is the new chapel at the Claremont Colleges School of Theology. Its long, narrow windows are stain glass. It is an angular building and its starkness gives it a kind of unreal effect.

Vaulted windows and textured walls give a lot of character to the public library in Upland. The other contemporary style building is the Pomona Civic Center with its interesting juxtaposing of a round building and an angular one with the pleasant landscaping around them.

Mr. Outy says WE'RE

Ms. In The Air; Up, Up And Away

Ruth Johnson started flying at 16. She stopped long enough to raise a family. Later, during World War II, she volunteered her time as a WASP (Women's Airforce Service Pilot.) Today she owns and manages her own flying school at Chino Airport.

Ruth is just one of several women who prove that flying is no longer just a man's field. Though women hardly dominate the sport, there are more of them testing their skills in the air.

Says Ruth, "There are a lot more women flying now. Flying hasn't changed that much, but the airplanes are easier to fly. They're more sophisticated."

Ruth is a 20-year flight enthusiast. Her interest in flying developed early, and she worked diligently to pay for flight instruction. Her efforts have paid off.

She currently claims 10,000 plane hours and has earned every possible aviation rating. Unusual? "Not really," says Ruth. "Flying is very relaxing. I feel safer in a plane than in a car. I don't go anywhere unless I fly."

Donna Freedman agrees. Donna has just earned her license at Cable Airport in Upland, and though she has seen some half dozen women receive their licenses in the last two years, she admits she's an unusual case.

"I'm really an exception," says Donna, "my husband taught me to fly, so I had a little leeway. It took me 65 hours to get my license but I could have done it in 40. It's just that I quit for awhile and had to pick it up again."

"Are there more women flying? Yes, because flying is becoming more popular. You can tell by the women you see around the airports. Five to six years ago, you never saw a woman flying."

Donna recalled one woman who learned to sport on her own initiative. The middle-aged woman wanted to surprise her husband. She took lessons, got her license and took off down the runway—much to her husband's amazement.

Donna also admits she'd rather fly than drive. "I feel much safer in an airplane, it's a good feeling to take off for a weekend and be flying over the freeway at 150 m.p.h. without a car in front of you."

Most women fliers defend the safety of flying. They detest the fallacies about the danger of small aircrafts. MSAC pre-med student and flyer, Cindy Lindeman, believes most of the danger talk are exaggerated. "Most of the things you hear about crash landings and airplanes are highly exploited. When you look at the percentage of automobile accidents in comparison to airplane accidents, auto accidents are a lot more prevalent."

"My aunt, Gini Richardson, has been in crashes and forced landings and she's always walked away from them. You always find a place to land."

Ms. Richardson runs a flight school in La Verne near Brackett Airport. She is recognized as an outstanding female pilot, having completed some 20,000 flight hours. She currently divides her time between crop dusting service in Yacima, Washington and the flight school.

Ms. Lindeman recalls her first exposure to flying with her aunt. "My aunt used to take me flying when I was very young. She'd tease us, doing loops and spins in the air."

"My aunt first started flying when she lived in Texas, she was a teenager when she first went up. Then she paid $8 an hour to fly. She only was earning $12 a week, so she'd fly for an hour on Saturdays and save the rest of her money."

The costs have jumped from the price Ms. Richardson used to pay. Now it costs between $16-35, to rent a plane, and up to $1,000 for a complete private course instruction. Flying is expensive, but according to the women who fly, it's worth it.

Says Ontario resident, Robin Perry, "No, flying's not cheap—but then it's relative. I think more women would fly if it wasn't so expensive. That's why you see so many middleaged and over-40 women learning to fly. After their children are grown up, they're more willing to try flying."

Ms. Lindeman observed, too, the number of middleaged women in the air. "Many of the younger girls are involved with their boyfriends. They don't feel they could commit themselves to flying. Yet so many of them love it once they try it."

Ms. Lindeman's free time is spent around the airports. Most of her good friends are in aviation. Her parttime job is as a bookkeeper at her aunt's flying school. She's thoroughly in love with flying. Why?

"Why? It's hard to put into words, but when you're up there, you're not part of the mass anymore. The world looks completely different. You have time for serenity."

Ms. Perry finds a sense of "detachment" in flying:

"You leave all your problems on earth. They're no phones ringing. You give your complete concentration to flying and push aside your problems."

"You find peace up there," she claims. "It's good for the soul. You discover that problems aren't as big as you think they are."

Ms. Freedman says flying has "changed her life." Her life now revolves around flying. "Whenever I pick up a book or magazine, it's an aviation book. It dominates your time. Yet you feel helpless because you can't possibly learn all there is to know about flying."

Flying is more than just a hobby to these women. It's a new way of travel. It's a challenge, a way to build confidence. A way to see those places you couldn't see by car.

Ms. Freedman frequently flies to Palm Springs for breakfast. Ms. Perry has seen Alaska, Mexico and Canada in her airplane. She just recently completed a three-day flight to Alaska with her family to visit relatives. She was the sole pilot—her husband doesn't fly.

Ms. Johnson has traveled extensively by airplane. All these women have flown. They all have witnessed the initial pre-flight fears and in-flight quivers. They have qualified as certified pilots. Do they consider themselves unusual to have mastered the flying techniques?

Ms. Perry insists that flying "is not a matter of sex. You learn to fly to enjoy flying. Sex has nothing to do with it."

Despite her beliefs, she still had to admit that the male competition was rough. Many of the flight instructors were young men, unwilling to teach older women. Says Ms. Perry, "I believe that women make better fliers. I did have a difficult time getting my license though. I had no encouragement from the male instructors. But I was determined enough to overlook their rudeness."

Ms. Freedman couldn't cite any differences, but felt that in general women have "fewer hangups" and put more faith in their instructors than do men.

"I've never considered flying a 'man's field.' There always have been women pilots around but they've been in the minority."

Flying has not yet been dominated by women. Yet these women pilots are evidence that women are taking to the sky, earning their pilot's licenses, racing in competition flights, and opening the way for female flyers.

It's not a matter of sex, but whether or not you can get a plane off the ground.
